

Title: How Involvement in Participatory Design of Public Places Assist in Overcoming Acculturative stress?

Insiders perspective (migrant and local participants)

Personal Story

1. Would you please briefly tell me a little bit about your migration story (e.g. what promoted your choice? Time framework? Was Adelaide your first choice of destination? Why? Did you come alone or with your family?)
2. Were there any difficulties you faced in the first five years of your arrival?
3. Would you describe your settlement experience as stressful? If so, what are the stressing aspects?
4. How did these difficulties affect your Identity (e.g. your view about yourself, your neighbourhood and the pace you live in)?

Participatory Process

5. In your first few years of arrival did you have the opportunity to involve in a community? How long have you been involved in the community?
6. How did you become involved with the group? Did someone tell you about it or did you find out on your own?
7. Did participating in place-making affect your migrant's experience (e.g. sense of belonging connection to the place? Could you explain more (e.g. What is the characteristic of the process that made you give these answers)?
8. Do you remember any moments of significance or achievements in the community (refer to timeline)? how did you feel in these moments?
9. Has participating in place-making helped you in your personal life (e.g. employment, first rent, other benefits?)
10. Has the opportunity of meeting people from different culture changed your perspective on your or their cultural background? How?

Recommendations

11. Based on your experience now, is there anything that you would do differently in the first five year of settlement?
12. Is there anything you would like to add about your experience that We did not discuss above?
13. Do you want to recommend any organisation or individuals that I might talk to for more information on what we had discussed today?

Local Stakeholders Perspective
